

The Old Hancock Protestant Cemetery Circa 1866 – 1960

In memory of the men and women who left their homelands to find a better life in the Copper Country, Michigan.

The attached project serves to recognize foreign and local born adults, children, infants and the many unknown and unnamed individuals that are interred in the Old Hancock Protestant Cemetery below the present day Gloria Dei Lutheran Church.

May they rest in peace, not to be forgotten.

Old Hancock Protestant Cemetery

Information compiled by John M. Blom, August 1, 2013

The Old Hancock Protestant Cemetery, located on West Quincy Street, lies underneath Gloria Dei Lutheran Church in west Hancock, Michigan.

Originally, the Cemetery belonged to the Quincy Mining Company which operated from around 1846 to 1945, though some aspects of the company still operated until the 1970s. Records exist showing the sale of Cemetery lots as early as 1866. The Quincy Mining Company gave the Cemetery to the city of Hancock, presumably to be under their care and maintenance.

In the 1960s, some Lutheran churches in Hancock planned to merge and it was determined that there was a need for a new church building. The location under main consideration was the Old Hancock Protestant Cemetery. Ownership of the Cemetery was returned to the Quincy Mining Company so that it could sell the Cemetery land site to the new combined churches of Gloria Dei. As part of the purchase, the manager of the Quincy Mining Company stipulated that no bodies interred in the Cemetery were to be relocated elsewhere within the Cemetery grounds, and that there should be a memorial park on the property that would honor those interred. The land was leveled and the markers were either covered over or moved to one side of the property.

The names listed on pages two through five are interred below the Church. Their names were identified from records of the Crawford Funeral Home, The Dick and June Ross Collection of obituaries from local newspapers at <http://www.mfhn.com/houghton> and at <http://seekingmichigan.org/>, where one can locate death certificates for citizens of Michigan from 1897 to 1920. Each record was cross checked to verify that these individuals were not listed on the old St. Joseph Cemetery roster, also referred to as the Old Catholic Cemetery of Hancock, nor the Lakeside Cemetery of Hancock.

The state of Michigan did not require death certificates until 1897, and it is stated that about a half of all deaths were not reported between 1867 and 1897. The site www.familysearch.org lists many deaths from 1867 to 1897 but the location of burial is not documented. Based upon this information, it seems plausible that more than 1,000 individuals are buried in the Old Protestant Cemetery and that many may never be identified. Some died and were buried without any identifying marker or record.

More than 8,000 death records were reviewed to compile the following lists. Most of those listed were from Hancock, Quincy and Franklin, and smaller numbers were found from Houghton, Stanton and Adams Townships. Stanton Township records were found at www.genealogia.fi.emi.emi77ae.htm. Please note that names followed by an asterisk are from the Ross Collection and when possible were verified at <http://seekingmichigan.org/>. It is frustrating to search for names on the web because names are not always spelled in a consistent way. Some names on this list are followed by a different spelling because this was the spelling on <http://seekingmichigan.org/>. Perhaps coroners were not proficient in spelling some of the northern and eastern European names or Michigan state data entry clerks were unable to read the handwriting of the coroners.

Individuals named on pages seven through twelve are buried in Hancock. The names are not found on either St. Joseph Catholic or Lakeside Cemetery burial lists and therefore may be buried in the Old Hancock Protestant Cemetery.

The format for the lists is last name, followed by a spelling used on <http://seekingmichigan.org/>, first name, date of death and age.

Individuals Buried in Hancock, not Lakeside Cemetery

From 1897 to 1902, cemetery locations were identified on death certificates, but after 1902 undertakers identified those interred in Lakeside Cemetery but used the designation H or HC for the Hancock city cemeteries. It is assumed that H or HC stood for the Old Protestant Cemetery or the St. Joseph Old Catholic Cemetery. The names listed below are designated as having been buried in H or HC. The names were not found on the Lakeside nor the St. Joseph Old Catholic Cemetery lists.

Hancock Burials, Catholic or Protestant

The deceased persons on the following list are identified as being buried in Hancock but without the exact cemetery designation. Family names of Irish, French Canadian, Russian, Polish and Croatian heritage might likely be of the Catholic faith and thus probably buried in the St. Joseph Old Catholic Cemetery; however, they are not listed on the existing list of burials found at the Catholic Church of the Resurrection that was built over the St. Joseph Old Catholic Cemetery. Perhaps some of these individuals were buried at the Old Catholic Cemetery but were buried without a marker so they would not appear on the existing list. The other possibility is that some were Protestant and were buried in the Old Protestant Cemetery.
